A word from Richard before you begin

Built against the 2023 National Electrical Code · National scope · BAR GOLD

You're holding more than a study guide. You're holding a path — from wherever you stand today to a passed journeyman exam and the career waiting on the other side.

Welcome to Currentline. The name is the promise: a clean line of current from where you are to where you're going, with nothing left to chance. Everything in this package was built to carry you the whole way — taught plainly, worked completely, and tested the way the real exam tests.

Who this is for

This was built for you whether you came up with every advantage or none at all. The National Electrical Code does not care where you started, and neither do I. The apprentice studying after a ten-hour shift and the foreman sharpening up for the license he put off for years are both welcome here, and both belong. This is an elite standard you reach by earning it — and the door is open to anyone willing to do the work.

What's in your hands

- The Master Manual — 24 chapters, the full 2023 NEC journeyman scope explained in plain trade language, with every required calculation worked end to end.
- The 120-Question Practice Exam — built to the real blueprint, every question carrying a full rationale: the answer, the NEC citation, the worked math, why each wrong choice misses, and the chapter that teaches it.

- The Exam Reader — runs all 120 like the real test: a 4-hour clock, a jump-to-any-question navigator, flags, and full rationales the moment you submit. The answer choices reshuffle every attempt, so there's no pattern to lean on — only knowing it.

The standard behind it

Everything here is built to one standard I call BAR GOLD: every article in the journeyman scope explained so it actually makes sense, every calculation shown line by line, every code lookup walked through — no padding, no filler, nothing faked. If it's in this package, it earned its place.

The heart behind Currentline

I built this from two things: faith and excellence. The faith is woven in by purpose, never forced on anyone — it's here so you know what I'm made of and what I believe about you.

And what I believe is simple: if I could climb this, so can you. Put in the reps. Honor the trade. Walk in on exam day already calm in the format, because you've already done it here a dozen times.

Let's get you licensed. — Richard
